Dean's Office Digest

February 5, 2018

The Dean's Office Digest, which comes out every other Monday, is two and a half years old. It was originally intended to cut down on the scores of one-off e-mail messages from the Office of the Dean of the College, but it has evolved into something quite different. It now facilitates communication about faculty accomplishments and opportunities across the College. As I look at today's Digest, I am pleased to see how much it highlights the breadth and vibrancy of our academic community. It announces nearly two dozen upcoming lectures and conferences, including tonight's talk in Wait Chapel by Margot Lee Shetterly, author of Hidden Figures. It shares rich opportunities for faculty recognition and development through calls for applications for our Faculty Leadership Award, Innovative Teaching Award, Engaged Humanities Grants, T-Cart Grants, Archie and Research Funding, and Faculty Fellowships. It lists the ten outstanding seniors across eight departments, selected out of 40 submissions, whose Senior Orations will be delivered at 5:00 pm Wednesday in Pugh Auditorium, and it encourages your attendance. In response to your ideas and contributions, the Digest has become a way to share the explorations and ambitions of an exceptional community of teacher-scholars in service to transformative education and knowledge. I think that's a good thing.

TECH TIP: SHARING YOUR CALENDAR

David John, Interim Director of Academic and Instructional Technology

This tech tip comes from Instructional Technologist Jo Lowe.

Google has updated our calendar. Some options have moved about in the calendar. An item of particular interest is the Access and Permissions settings. If you want to share your calendar with others, this is the NEW way to accomplish this task:

1. Click Settings (gear icon on the right side of the screen) >  Settings.
2. On the left, select your calendar and then click Access permissions.
3. Select how you want to share your calendar:
 - If you want your calendar to be available publicly on the web, check the Make Available To Public box.
 - If you want your calendar to be available only to your organization, check the Make Available for Wake Forest University box. This is the default setting for the university and helpful for using features such as scheduling appointments.
4. Next to each sharing permission, click the down arrow.
5. Choose a sharing permission option:
 - See only free/busy (hide details)
 - See all event details
 - Make changes to events
 - Make changes and manage sharing

Share your calendar with specific people and choose how much they can see.

When you share your calendar with people, you can decide how they see your events and whether they can also make changes, such as adding or editing events.

1. Click Settings >  Settings.

2. On the left, click the down arrow next to your name under Settings for My Calendars and then click Share with specific people.
3. Click Add People and enter the email address or names of the people you want to share your calendar with.
4. Choose a sharing permission option:
 - See only free/busy (hide details)
 - See all event details
 - Make changes to events
 - Make changes and manage sharing

For other tips and tutorials, visit the Instructional Technology Group site or contact your instructional technologist.
