

Accommodations for Narcolepsy

1. Narcolepsy is a chronic medical condition that can be disruptive to daytime wakefulness. Although symptoms are controlled by appropriate medication, from time to time, this student may have episodes of sleepiness or difficulty with wakefulness during class.
2. Students with Narcolepsy may benefit from recording lectures in some format to aid in retaining information from class. Our office can provide software to aid in recording class content (Sonocent), and we will keep a recording confidentiality record on file for any students needing this accommodation.
3. During flares in symptoms, this student may benefit from flexible attendance or flexible deadlines on assignments. Please discuss with the student at the outset of the semester how and when communication of the need for flexible attendance or deadlines should occur during the semester.
